Naomi Colledge

Senior Architect

Naomi studied at the Manchester School of Architecture and registered as an architect in 2009 after graduating from Kingston University with a post graduate diploma in professional practice. Prior to joining David Morley Architects in 2011, Naomi spent 5 years with jmarchitects where she gained experience across a number of sectors, initially assisting in the delivery of a series of primary care health centres in the north-west.

Naomi gained further experience working on a variety of smaller projects in central London in the education, residential and commercial sectors progressing to the role of project architect delivering a new music department for a school and a residential development utilizing prefabricated timber construction. Most recently Naomi worked with Kings College Hospital on an extensive, phased refurbishment of their maternity wards and neonatal intensive care unit and integration of new birthing facilities.

Naomi is currently working on a new private hospital in Maidstone for the Kent Institute of Medicine and Surgery. In this role she is responsible for internal packages and the interior design strategy. Naomi is also a member of the office 'Green Masterplanning Group'.
